

possible, so he cut himself up the ice-wall. I am sorry I did not time this, as it seemed long.

'The whole climb was extremely interesting.'

13. August 5, 1911.—J. C. H. Runge, W. R. Caesar. Guides—Abraham II. and Gottfried Müller. See under Various Expeditions.

14. (?) August, 1911.—John W. S. Brady. Guides—Christian Kaufmann, Alexis Croux.

No particulars have been received of the last expedition.

It is a most peculiar fact that up to last year every party encountered the greatest difficulties with ice. Last year my friends Lloyd and Runge tell me they had no continuous step-cutting in ice until quite at the end, getting through the line of ice-cliffs. In a dry season like the last, I should have expected exactly the reverse, and that the whole face would be one sheet of ice. It is tolerably certain that, generally, hard ice will be found, and he who leads or even shares in the leading up that mighty face needs no further testimony to his abilities.

ALPINE ACCIDENTS IN 1911.

THE fatal accident on the Aiguille du Plan was recorded 'A.J.' xxvi. 77. 'La Montagne,' 1911, pp. 571-81, gives a full account from the pen of Dr. Th. Thomas, of the heroic enterprise of his guide, the late Auguste Blanc, to which was due the recovery of the body of M. Caillet from the difficult and dangerous ice couloir where it had lodged, frozen into the ice. It was only after many hours of extremely dangerous work that success crowned the efforts of Dr. Thomas and his two guides. A photograph of that face of the mountain accompanies the description, on which the lines of usual ascent are marked and the places of the twofold accident are to be seen. 'La Montagne,' pp. 592-98, gives a full account by Dr. Thomas of the lamentable accident by which a few days later Auguste Blanc lost his own life.

On August 18 Drs. Guillemard and Régnier, with the guide Antonin Claret-Tournier and the porter Pierre Casoli, reached the observatory on the summit of Mont Blanc. On the 21st about midday, during a violent thunderstorm, lightning struck the hut, knocking Casoli senseless and setting his clothes on fire, resulting in severe burns. He received every possible attention at the hands of the two scientists and of M. Vallot, but succumbed to his injuries a few hours after reaching Chamonix.

NEW EXPEDITIONS IN 1911 (AND 1894).

Graian Alps.

ALBARON (3662 m. = 12,015 ft.), STRAIGHT UP THE E.N.E. FACE AND POINTE REGAUD BY THE E.N.E. FACE.—On August 6, 1911, Mr. C. F. Meade with Pierre Blanc left the Chalet des Evettes at 3.10 A.M. and arrived at the bergschrund E.N.E. of the top of the Albaron and directly under it about 5.50. The bergschrund appeared to be practicable at one point only. Above it a fairly steep slope of good snow led to shale and loose but very easy rocks by which the
