'Though this has not been a good climbing year, a few high ascents have been successfully accomplished, the most difficult one being the ascent of Mount La Perouse by Mr. H. Chambers. Though it is the second ascent of the mountain, it is the first time it has been climbed from the eastern side, which meant a very long climb, and a traverse of two other peaks before the summit could be reached.'

NEW EXPEDITIONS.

Mont Blanc Group.

MONT DOLENT, BY THE S.W. FACE.—Reverting to the ascent described on p. 164, Count Aldo Bonacossa informs us that the same route was followed on June 6, 1917, by himself with Sergeant Julien Rey of Courmayeur, while on leave. They left Pré de Bar at 0.45 and reached the summit at 9.45, and were back at 13 h. The only obstacle was a great crevasse about midway up the Glacier de Pré de Bar.

The remarkable series of ascents made in 1921 by the same climber will be noted in the Record of Expeditions.

PASSAGE FROM THE WEISSHORN HUT TO THE UPPER PLATEAU OF THE BIES GLACIER. Mr. C. F. Meade with Pierre Blanc. Aug. 13, 1910.—This useful passage was referred to 'A.J.' XXV. 275, note. Further particulars are now available :

'I find from my diary that we crossed the more westerly and less obvious of two depressions in the E. arête of the Weisshorn. This depression occurs below the point where the usual Weisshorn route joins the arête, and when we left the Weisshorn hut (4.15 A.M.) we kept the parties bound for the Weisshorn well away on our left.

'After crossing the depression mentioned we descended across two bergschrunds (about 6.40 A.M.), and continued descending westerly (i.e. towards our left) till we could ascend a snow couloir in the rock barrier running down N.E. On surmounting the barrier we found ourselves on the plateau of the Bies Glacier. The Bieshorn was subsequently reached at 10.20 A.M., and the Brunegghorn at 2.25 P.M. The times include an hour and a quarter's halt. The going was heavy and the weather misty.'
